Code for America enlists the brightest minds of the web industry into public service to use their skills to solve core problems facing our communities. Now entering its second year, Code for America is looking for the next generation of tech-savvy civic leaders — developers, designers, researchers, analysts, and entrepreneurs — to use their skills to make a difference through a year-long fellowship building innovative, reusable applications for governments across the country in 2012. Apply now.

During the year-long program, you will not only receive a living-wage stipend, travel expenses, and healthcare, but also the training and support to be ready to lead in business, public service, or both:

- Gov 2.0 Training: You will start with a crash course in municipal government and gain a practical understanding of the vital intersection of politics and technology.
- Professional Development: The biggest names in the web industry and the Gov 2.0 movement will provide you unparalleled networking, mentoring, and support.
- Alumni Connections: Working closely with other talented individuals, you will develop lasting professional relationships in a fast-paced, startup atmosphere.
- Employer Partnerships: Multiple leading internet companies have pledged to guarantee interviews for a full-time position after CfA.
- A Labor of Love: In a collaborative, high-energy environment, you’ll not only accomplish a lot, you’ll have a lot of fun with other passionate fellows.
